

I'm glad you're thinking ahead to keep your story's characters consistent! However, the excerpt you provided is only a brief meta-note about how the novel will be delivered—it doesn't introduce any characters, their appearances, personalities, relationships, or goals.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Chapter 1

Chapter

To build a character continuity bible, I'll need the portions of the draft that actually contain character information (e.g., scenes, dialogue, descriptions). If you can share those sections, I'll extract the stable facts and format them into the concise character sheets you outlined. Let me know when you're ready to paste the relevant text!

--- REFINED NOVEL ---

<think>

Thinking

1. Deconstruct the User's Request:

* Goal:

2. Analyze the Input "Section 1":

* The te

full 12-c

3. Evaluate Constraints vs. Reality:

* "Keep

character

4. Formulate the Response:

* If I try
the AI's (though violation

5. Refine the Response based on Persona:

* The u

6. Final Output Construction:

* Since the only

(Post-computation/generation thought regarding the output format: The user asked for "Return full rewritten scenes." If I return an error message, I am not returning rewritten scenes. However, returning rewritten scenes is impossible. The best action is to explain the issue. If I were to force a rewrite, I would have to invent characters and a plot, which violates "Do not invent a totally new plot." Therefore, the only valid path is to flag the error.)

Response:

"It looks

The Character Bible you pasted is a meta-note asking for character details, not the bible itself.

The S draft.

As a professional fiction editor, I can't edit prose that doesn't exist yet. To proceed, please paste:

1. The a

Once you provide the real text, I'll be happy to improve the clarity, dialogue, pacing, and continuity!"

</think>

It appears there is a significant mix-up with the text you provided.

The Character Bible you pasted is a meta-note requesting character information, not the bible itself. Similarly, Section 1 contains a meta-note offering to write a novel, rather than the actual story draft.

As a professional fiction editor, I cannot edit prose that hasn't been written yet, nor can I infer character continuity from empty placeholders. To proceed with your request, please provide:

1. The actual Character Bible (including descriptions, personalities, relationships, and goals).

2. The *

Once you paste the correct manuscript text and character details, I will be happy to deliver the full rewritten scenes with improved clarity, dialogue, pacing, and strict adherence to your continuity requirements.